I want to put the holiday plan in writing so there's no confusion later. Spring break is April 14–18. Under the parenting plan, Maya is with me Monday through Wednesday and with you Thursday and Friday. I'm happy to swap Wednesday for Thursday if that helps with your work schedule, but I need to know by April 1 so I can book the camp. Please reply in writing either way.

Also, her dentist appointment moved to April 22 at 3:15 PM. I can take her unless you'd like to.

The content SHA-256 above is computed from every message as it appears in this exhibit: its number, the exact time it was sent (UTC, to the millisecond), the service, the sender's address, the text and the attachment names and sizes. Exporting the same conversation again with the same settings gives the same value; any change to any message changes it. The SHA-256 of this PDF file itself cannot be printed inside the file, so it is recorded in the export log and hash manifest saved with the exhibit.

ABOUT THE SOURCE

If Messages in iCloud is on, this Mac may hold only part of the history: Messages keeps older messages in iCloud according to its Keep Messages setting. Only messages stored on this Mac are included.

WhatsApp exports may be capped by WhatsApp: on iPhone an export holds roughly the most recent 10,000 messages with media, or 40,000 without. Older messages may not be in this file, and nothing in it shows how much is missing.

WhatsApp writes times without a time zone. Exhibit shows them as written, treated as America/Los_Angeles (UTC−08:00). If the phone was in another zone, the real times differ.

Edited messages are flagged, but WhatsApp exports don't include what they said before. Deleted messages appear only as a placeholder.

Every date in this file could be read as day/month or month/day. Exhibit read them as Month/Day/Year; confirm this is right.

Senders are shown as the names saved in the exporting phone's contacts. The export doesn't include their phone numbers.

This record is provided to support authentication of the exhibit, for example under Federal Rules of Evidence 901(b)(4) and 902(14), or the equivalent rules of a state or other court. It is not a certification, and the software that produced it is not a witness. A person with knowledge of these messages should review the exhibit and sign any declaration or certification the court requires.
